Peggy's Travel Tips

National Parks are our treasures.

Leave the park better than you found it

General rule of the land: Leave the park better than you found it. If you see trash, throw it out, and don't disturb animals or habitats.

Remember: our parks need to be protected.

National Park Summer Vacations

There's something irresistible about national park trips. From turquoise lakes to rugged coastline, from the geysers of Yellowstone National Park to the grandeur of Yosemite National Park, the sheer exhilaration of being amid incredible surroundings is hard to ignore.

These natural places make children and adults equals in their wonder. You don't need to know how to read to understand the splendor; in fact, it may be an impediment. Parents can teach their children about natural history; children can teach their parents to see the beauty around them.

The parks can challenge every member of the family, both physically and mentally.

You can come home with real accomplishments to think back on. And the towns around the parks are accustomed to serving families. You don't have to worry about fitting in, and you'll likely meet other families with children. Many park areas even have educational programs and camps that allow children and parents to spend time apart, learning on their own.
