Havana, Cuba No longer off-limits

Cuba's capital Havana has traditionally been the kind of destination where dreaming will have to do...it's been off-limits to most Americans for over a half-century. But now this metropolis, which looks & feels & hums with an energy unlike any other city in the world, is within reach.

Founded in 1515, Havana has over 500 years of history, 2 million residents, 0 places like it in the world. From the distinct blend of classical & modern architecture to the wide & walkable El Malecon seawall, from the iconic El Morro Castle to the famous American classic cars...none newer than midcentury but most pridefully done up in a fresh coat of paint.

Located 90 miles south of Key West, Florida, this colorful, island of yesteryear is ripe for exploration, particularly now that the political relationship with the U.S. has begun to thaw.
