Did you Know?

There's a speakeasy In Disneyland!!
Hidden behind a dull green door in Disneyland's New Orleans Square is one of the park's most exclusive and mysterious attractions: a VIP lounge called Club 33.
Walt Disney built the club as a secret hideaway for dignitaries and celebrities, and he even went to New Orleans to personally pick out the knickknacks for the interior. During the 44 years that Club 33 has been operational, it's served the likes of Johnny Depp, Elton John, and scads of executives from companies such as Boeing, Chevron, and AT&T.
But if you're hoping to join, you'll have to be patient. It takes about 10 years to get on the waiting list, after which you'll have to fork over $10,000 in initiation fees and another $3,500 each year that you're a member.
